HOLABIRD & ROOT ADDS CHIEF STRUCTURAL ENGINEER

CHICAGO, IL - Holabird & Root is pleased to announce that Tom Harrison, SE, PE, AIA, LEED AP has accepted the position of chief structural engineer at Holabird & Root.

“Tom’s wealth of experience and range of attributes make him the perfect candidate for this position,” said Greg Cook, AIA, a principal at Holabird & Root. “Tom’s career focus of integrating architecture and engineering precisely match what we are seeking for this role. His many years of broad, multi-disciplinary experience working with our target client bases make him a valuable new addition to our organization.”

After earning a bachelor’s degree in architecture from Ball State University, Tom completed his master’s degree in structural engineering at the University of Washington. Since then, he has spent 25 years in the industry. He is a licensed architect and structural engineer in Illinois and a licensed professional engineer in Washington and Texas. Tom is a nationally recognized author, conference presenter, and committee chairperson. He cofounded the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE) Sustainability Committee and served as chairman on ASCE’s Committee on Aesthetics in Design. Prior to joining Holabird & Root, Tom served as a senior structural engineer at Arup and as a senior associate at Cannon Design.

“Holabird & Root’s reputation for excellence speaks for itself and I feel honored to be working with an incredibly talented group of professionals,” said Harrison. “I look forward to bringing my passion and expertise in both architecture and engineering to all of the projects and assisting the Holabird team in creating integrated solutions for all of our clients.”

Holabird & Root is a Chicago-based architecture, engineering, and interior design firm. Since its founding in 1880, Holabird & Root has been recognized for its history of translating complex challenges into thoughtful solutions for clients in the academic, government, cultural and civic, and corporate markets. Holabird & Root celebrates over 130 years of professional service, innovative design, advanced technology, and collaboration.
